Leesburg.

A correspondent of the Baltimore Sun gives the following description of Leesburg: "This town, is one of the oldest in this beautiful in the State. It is the county seat of Loudoun county, and is 37 miles from Washington by way of the Washington and Ohio division of the Richmond and Danville Railroad, the terminus of which branch is at Rauroad, the terminas of which heads is at Round Hill, twelve miles north-west of this town. The Potomac river is a few miles distant. The surface of the town, partaking of the nature of the surrounding country, is slightly rolling, and at this season, when almost continuous rains and melting snows have rendered the clay roads well-nigh impassible, the streets, which are laid out at right angles with each other, cannot deny PERRY, SMOOT & CO.

Steam Flooring & Planing Mill

The streets, however, are paved with cobblestones or are macadamized, and are lined with brick pavements, and a large force of the streets. and a large force of men are employed by the corporation to scrape the streets fre-quently, so that, with the exception of rainy weather, they are exceptionally clean at all times. Gasoline lamps placed at convenient intervals light the streets, and excellent water is piped all over the town without machinery from the never-failing and ever-pure Rock spring, which is situated on a little knoll near the western corporation limits. The public schools, one for white and one for colored children, are situated here, and are well at-tended. A paid fire-engine company and a volunteer one constitute the fire department, volunteer one constitute the fire department, and the engines are drawn by men, and the pumps are worked by hand. The town government consists of Hon. Joseph L. Norris, mayor; Captain H. O. Clagett, recorder; twelve common councilmen, and Benjamin Head, town sergeant. The council meet at the mayor's office, but $15,000 have been voted to build during the coming summer a town hall. The Loudoun county courthouse, two stories high, built of brick, with a lofty, pillared portice, and surcourthouse, two stories high, built of brick, with a lofty, pillared portice, and surmounted by a small wooden belfry, stands at the corner of Market and King streets, in the middle of a well-kept lawn, and surrounded by tall, rugged elms and well-developed maples. The lawn, which is fenced with an iron railing, is the pride of the town, and citizens claim that it is the feact of its high in the State. In the recent finest of its kind in the State. In the rear of the courthouse is the clerk's office, also a two-story building, with a fire proof annex, for the preservation of records, &c.

Adjourning the courthouse lawn on the north is the Reamer House, kept by Mr. Jas. Reamer. This is the only hotel in the town, as the old Landoun House is used now for office purposes. It is proposed, however, to build in the near future a new hotel, and $25,000 of stock have been subscribed for that purpose. The Protestant Episcopal Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church, which is the old stone church made famous by the sessions within its walls of the first Virginia Conference, over one hundred years ago, and of the Baltimore Conference in March, 1812, are surrounded by their graveyards, where the marble slabs, black from nature's peltings, are the memorials of the older inhabitants. Some of the tombstones bear dates of the last century, though many are of more modern date. Beneath what was once the chancel, but which is now the body of Shelburne Parish Church, lie the remains of Rev. John Dunn, an Englishman by birth, who was for many years the rector, and who died in 1827, and beneath the vestry room are the graves of the members of the Berkeley family. The remains of Rev. Christo-pher Frye, for many years pastor of the old stone church, lie near the north wall of that building. North of the town is the cemetery, where stands among the graves of Confederate dead a tall shaft erected by the Ladies' Confederate Memorial Association of the town. Leesburg is over a hundred years old, and many points of historic interest are in or On Loudoun street, near King; near it. On Loudoun street, near king; is pointed out a house where George Washington stopped at one time, and on Wirt street, near Cornwail, is a small one-story building once occupied as a residence and office by William Wirt. A few miles northeast of the town is Ball's Bluff, the scene of a fierce near it. engagement during the last war, when many conflicts took place in the streets of Leesburg. Most of the houses are built of brick and are two stories high, and many have hospitable little porches in front. Stores are numerous, and many present the ap-pearance of having recently been improved inside and out. The surrounding country, which gradually rises towards the distant spurs of the Blue Ridge, is settled by peo-ple of independent means. "Morvin," the former country seat of Thos. Swann, is now the home of Dr. Shirley Carter, and is beau-tifully situated arroang the hills north of the tifully situated among the hills north of the town. One of the handsomest residences in the suburbs is that of Mr. C. R. Paxton. Leesburg is the home of men well known in the country. Here reside Capt. J. W. Foster, Commonwealth's attorney, who was prominent in the nominating convention of Landrein's Gal'den Seeds.

We have just received our first supply of the celebrated Seeds for this season.
